Emergency Decrees Are Expected to Be Issued Immediately

BERLIN.—(AP)—Two men of outstanding importance in this time of Germany's crisis are speeding toward Berlin to take part in vital discussions scheduled during the next few days. President Von Hindenburg is coming from his country place and Dr. Hans Luther, president of the Reichsbank is flying from Basel where he attended the world bank meeting. The president is expected primarily to receive Premier Ramsay MacDonald, and foreign Secretary Henderson of England Friday, but it is likely his arrival Wednesday will have a soothing effect on the nation's nerves. Luther's arrival late Tuesday afternoon is likely to be followed soon by the issuance of new emergency decrees, including regulations governing foreign exchange traffic and measures to halt the flight of capital from the country. Banks were closed by a government decree Tuesday.

BATON ROUGE, La.—(AP)—A headless body, believed by police to be that of Earl Miles, missing New Orleans youth and sportsman, was found Monday in a ditch on a deserted plantation only a few yards from a side highway about 10 miles south of here. Search of the ditch failed to reveal the head.

The body, discovered by a negro farm hand, had been disposed of by the killers five miles from a swimming hole off Perkins Road, where last Wednesday sheriff's deputies located a blood-streaked rented coach in which Miles left New Orleans a week ago with two unidentified companions.

Kansas Independents Enter Oil Conference

WICHITA, Kas.—(AP)—Their oil supply threatened by the resolution of Kansas producers to shut down all wells, effective Wednesday, independent refiners of Kansas met here Monday in closed session to discuss the situation. While many producers believed the refining companies were in sympathy with them in the fight for an increase in the price of crude, no word came out of the meeting to indicate what action if any, was planned by the refiners to protect their interests if the shutdown becomes general over the state.

Girls Study Charm For Life On Farm

FRANKFORT, Ky.—(AP)—A study course in personal charm is being pursued by 28 girls in the Good Luck 4-H club of Nicholas county. But good health, mental alertness, ambition and the desire and ability to work, rather than gold on curls and baby blue eyes, are being stressed, with an eye to meeting farm conditions. The main project of this club is clothing construction, but the girls felt that clothing may mean little unless they have health, cleanliness, good posture and other personal charm to go with it.

Largest Plane Is Almost Finished

Will Be World's Largest Commercial Ship When Completed

NEW YORK.—(AP)—The largest commercial airplane in the world is nearing completion in Connecticut and it can trace its ancestry directly to a mosquito which lived and died in Russia in 1910.

In that year a young man of 27 abandoned experiments he had been conducting with a helicopter and built his first airplane. To the considerable surprise of his friends the plane flew. It flew, in fact 12 times. But on the 13th hop the engine died in midair and the plane crashed to demolition.

The young inventor crawled unharmed from the wreckage and set about discovering the reason for the engine's sudden cessation. At last, working by the process of elimination, he came to the gas line. He blew through it and out came one defunct mosquito which had clogged the fuel line and thus, as it turned out, given its life for the advancement of science.

"Planes will never be safe," the inventor decided, "so long as so feeble a thing as a mosquito can destroy the power plant. Evidently what must be done is to have more than one engine so that when the need arises they can be divided, one for the mosquito and one for the plane."

Thus the idea of the multi-motored planes was born in the mind of Igor Sikorsky, later to become one of the world's greatest aeronautical designers. The flying boat with wheel gear for landings on earth now nearing completion in the Sikorsky factory near Bridgeport is the largest plane ever built except the German DO-X and the largest intended for regular commercial service.

It is 75 feet long, has a 114-foot wing spread, is 23 feet high from the ground to the top of the cabin, and has a cabin 58 feet long accommodating 40 passengers and a crew of five. It should be ready for its first flying tests the end of this month and when all tests are completed will go into service on the Caribbean line of Pan-American Airways. A sister ship is already begun.

Oil Man Charged With Mail Fraud Blames Employees

C. C. Julian Charged in Promotion of Six Companies

PLEADS NOT GUILTY

Attorneys in Effort to Furnish $50,000 Bond for Release

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla.—(AP)—C. C. Julian, oil promoter Tuesday blamed his disgruntled former employees for his detention in jail while his attorneys renewed efforts to furnish a $50,000 bond for his release on a charge of using the mails to defraud. He pleaded not guilty when arraigned in court Monday night.

Others Arrested
OKLAHOMA CITY.—(AP)—C. C. Julian, spectacular oil operator was arrested on a federal mail fraud charge Monday.

Arrested with Julian were C. C. (Tex) Boren, associate and personal body guard for Julian, and H. D. Topp, accountant for the C. C. Julian oil and royalties company, the affairs of which recently figured in federal and district court cases here.

The complaints on which they were arrested, signed by Roy S. Lewis, United States attorney, charged mail fraud in connection with six oil companies promoted here by Julian, alleging that more than $2,000,000 was obtained through the sale of trust certificates in the companies.

Julian's bail was fixed at $50,000 by George J. Eacock, United States commissioner, and bonds for Topp and Boren were fixed at $10,000 each. Julian has been much in the public eye of late, an orgy of litigation following his arrest a few months ago in Laredo, Texas, where he was accused of attempting extortion, kidnapping and carrying a forbidden weapon.

In Oklahoma courts, he was haled recently on a receivership action initiated by Miss Marjorie Bennett, Hollywood stockholder in the C. C. Julian Oil and Royalties company.

1,500 Fords Sold to U. S. Postoffice

Largest Motor Purchase by Government Since World War

WASHINGTON.—The United States Postoffice Department last week placed an order with the Washington Branch of the Ford Motor Company for 1,500 motor truck chassis, of which 500 will be 3-4 tons carrying capacity and 1,000 of 1 1/2 tons carrying capacity. The purchase of the motor equipment was the largest made by a government department since the war. With this order Ford sales to the Postoffice department during recent years reached a total of 2,900 units.

The purchase marked another step in the Department's program of building up its fleet of several thousand trucks and also to replace some of the surplus trucks turned over to the Postoffice Department by the Army at the close of the war. Deliveries are to start immediately and continue as rapidly as the bodies contracted for are ready for installation. The completed trucks will then be distributed to some 60 cities throughout the United States.

Two Wounded By Flippin Farmer

Horton Jones Shoots Tenant Three Times, Injuring Him Critically

MOUNTAIN HOME.—Horton Jones, farmer living near Flippin, Marion county, ran amuck late Sunday, critically wounded his tenant, Ben Dodson, and inflicted a flesh wound on Judge Donovan, driver for the White River Power Company. Later he shot off one of his own fingers. Jones and Dodson spent the afternoon together, it was said. The shooting took place at the Will Henry farm, one half mile east of Flippin. The men renewed an old quarrel, and Jones drew a revolver and shot Dodson through the neck, the jaw and the right shoulder. Dodson is not expected to recover. He has a wife and four children.

About an hour later Jones attacked Donovan, wounding him in the left elbow. Reports from Flippin early Sunday night said Jones had not been arrested but had surrendered to friends.

New Plymouth Is Local Sensation

Rocking Engine Absorbs Vibration of 4-Cylinder Plant

The new Plymouth—Walter Chrysler's $10,000 bid for supremacy in the low-priced automobile field—arrived in Hope Tuesday.

Barney Hamm, local dealer, unloaded four new cars, two four-door models, a coach and a coupe. Mr. Hamm also had a demonstrator here from Texarkana during the morning, and Hope residents had a chance to drive.

Although the new Plymouth has free-wheeling, one of the most talked-of improvements in the last 10 years, it has something else that makes motoring akin to flying—an insulated engine which rocks in the motor frame and absorbs its own vibration.

This "floating power" plant is an amazing experience for any driver. The Plymouth is a 4-cylinder car but the power impulses feel like those of an 8. The engine, rocking on rubber saddles in its steel cradle, delays the power thrust and absorbs the vibration.

Crysler's development is simply this: Instead of fastening the engine to the frame at the bottom, it is fastened at the bottom at the back, and a top at the front. Thus a vibration line is drawn diagonally from the bottom of the engine at the rear to the top at the front. The oscillation of the rear cylinder head at the top is checked because the front end of the cylinder head is not free as in conventional automobiles, but is fastened to the frame. Thus, the engine is mounted on the frame, at the rear cylinders, but is suspended from the frame, at the front cylinders.

The motor suspension points are sunk in huge saddles of rubber, and when idling the entire engine rocks as much as two inches from side to side. A sudden opening of the throttle causes the motor to lean over slightly. The free-wheeling device, of course, cuts out the engine whenever its speed drops below that of the car. There is this difference, however, that the vibration and noise noticeable when coasting with an open clutch is entirely missing.

The new Plymouth on demonstration Tuesday morning changed gears all the way from high to low without touching the clutch, while making 55 miles an hour. The driver making 20 miles an hour in traffic may slip from high into second and speed up to 50 in a few seconds. The demonstration car had registered a top speed of 70 on trial in Texarkana, it was said.

The most remarkable fact about the new Plymouth is the complete insulation of both the motor and transmission from the frame. There is no power vibration on pick-up, and no motor drag on deceleration.

This was the unusual ending of 14-year-old Sidney Carlson's glider flight at Sea Cliff, Long Island, the other day. The boy, frightened, had attempted to descend after a brick wind had carried the craft to an unexpected height of 40 feet. The pilot and the glider, both uninjured, were rescued by firemen.

Missouri Starts Hunt For Lioness

Escaped From Overturned Circus Truck Some Months Ago

NEW MADRID, Mo.—(AP)—Big game hunting has been revived hereabouts, at least until a circus lioness is recaptured. A circus truck overturned recently, and a male and a female lion escaped. The male was captured later, but the mate made good her escape.

The trainer and keeper of the lioness insists if brought to bay, she would not prove troublesome to any kind-hearted person who might want to give her food and lodging until the circus officials could be notified.

The inhabitants of a wooded tract east of here, where the beast has been seen several times, have seen the mangled and partially eaten carcasses of calves and other animals and they insist the evidence does not prove the lioness to be of a gentle disposition.

Circus men say they can take the beast alive if they can get close enough for the lioness to see them, but farmers have been heard to say a long rifle's shot distance must always separate them and the lioness.

A Thought

It is not to have controlled events, but confess plainly that events have controlled me.—Abraham Lincoln.

The War Reaches Berlin

Two things are impressed upon our mind as we follow the news from abroad:

First, the war has finally gotten to Berlin. Those of us who were disappointed when the Allies declared a truce in France instead of pushing into Germany and ravaging that country even is it had ravaged France, may rest assured that now—thirteen years after the Armistice—the German capital is being exacted from the German capital, broken banks, paralyzed industry and a panicky people.

Second, the other thing we learn is, that complete victory in the war is an empty thing—for when revenge has at last been exacted, we find that the world has moved on, forgetting the war and wishing to forgive the punishment.

Only in this manner may you explain the strange course of the war, the debt moratorium the last two weeks. Here are the United States and the United States, the two prime factors in the world's defeat, allied with their former enemy and open enemies to their old ally France—all because Germany is now and France seems bent on still kicking her.

German and American opinion has veered completely during the last thirteen years—something that the world cannot understand.

One dear reader, if you would understand it, you would read the story of the world. You would have to read the story of nations jammed up against each other, hating one another and battling over boundary lines for perhaps the last fifteen hundred years.

The story of war is interminable. We begin to understand about that as we view Germany's attempt to raise a loan from her European neighbors. All of them are willing except France. The French say that the first Paris government that votes a loan to Germany will be defeated at the polls.

That's charity for you. It isn't the American viewpoint. It isn't the English view. But then neither of these nations has been in exactly France's position since the day that Charles Martel whipped the Moors at the Battle of Tours and built a French empire with a German neighbor just north of it.

We Americans are well enough out of it.

There is no answer to this riddle, except to give devout thanks to our wise forefathers who cautioned Young America to keep clear of foreign entanglements.

We fought a war in 1817-18, and promptly forgot it. We fought in 1913 to find that Europe is still fighting it.

Our discovery throws into sharp relief the great idealism of Woodrow Wilson when he offered the League of Nations to a waiting world. Only now do we understand the proportions of the job he was outlining in an effort to eliminate war.

And if Wilson himself could look back upon this earth today he would be disheartened.

"Old Ironsides"

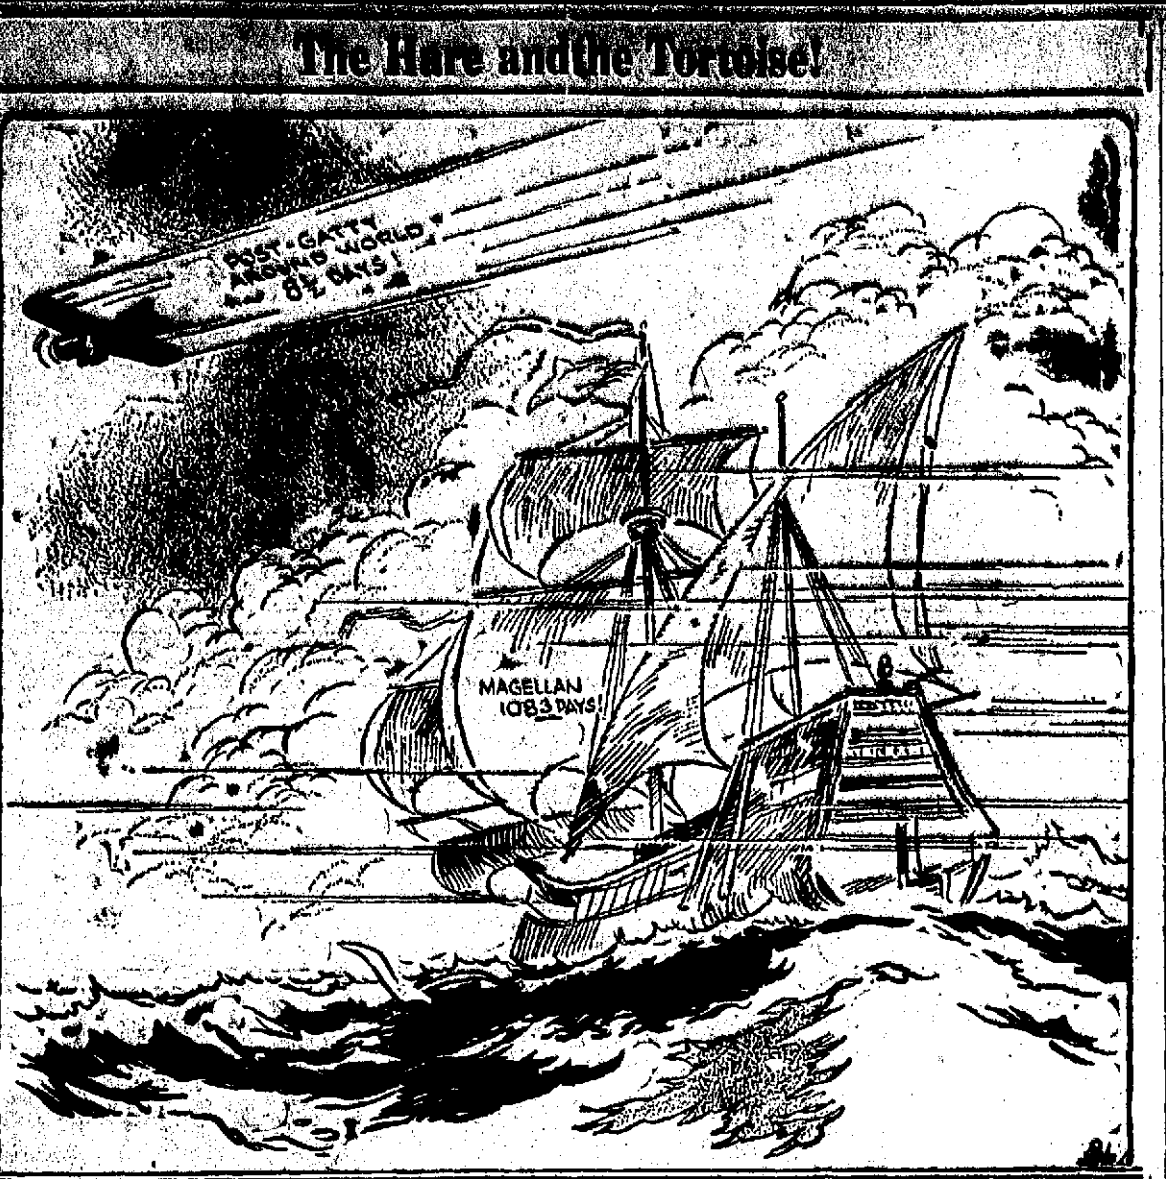

EVEN if the Constitution had not been a famous warship by reason of her victories on the high seas, she would be worth preserving just as a memento of vanished days—a memento of the time when wood and canvas were supreme at sea and Yankee shipbuilders were among the best on earth.

The re-conditioning of the old frigate and her present voyage along the Atlantic coast stir abundant memories. Even if not more than 15 per cent of the original ship remains in existence, the Constitution is a magnificent object lesson of the way the old New England shipbuilders were able to combine beauty and utility in one vessel.

The debt that the nation as a whole owes to those old craftsmen and designers is not sufficiently appreciated. The Constitution was only one of many great ships that were fashioned in New England a century and more ago. A few were warships; more were merchantmen—swift, sturdy and seaworthy, built for long voyages, destined to carry the American flag all over the globe and give American trade a stimulus that helped make possible the conquest of the continent.

Many of the great fortunes of New England came from overseas trade. The money thus accumulated served, later on, as capital to develop the west. Gold reserves that piled up through the enterprise of the shippers helped to build western railroads, exploit western mines and establish western factories. The opening of the interior of America would have been a much slower process if it had not been for the shipbuilders of Maine and Massachusetts.

Today "Old Ironsides" goes to sea again: and as she rides the waves she serves as a living reminder of a bright period in American history.

Washington Letter

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—The man at the American end of the trans-Atlantic telephone during the debt suspension negotiations with France is Undersecretary of State William R. Castle, a tall, spare aristocrat who came from the bottom right up to the top among our diplomats.

During the most critical moments of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon's conversations in Paris Secretary of State Stimson was on the high seas, bound not for France, but Italy. Castle was at the helm in the department, in close touch with President Hoover across the street at the White House.

Plain Spoken

These relative positions at such a time caused some comment, centering on the fact that Hoover and Castle are very good friends and that Castle is both smooth and popular in his handling of both foreign diplomats and the newspaper correspondents who have been keeping the world advised of the plans and reactions of this government. Correspondents, at least, find that the legal-minded Mr. Stimson is likely to talk all around his subject when he can be persuaded to talk at all, whereas the pleasant, genial Mr. Castle can make things reasonably plain to them without either saying any more than he wants to say or giving them any wrong steers.

Castle speaks rather softly, with great deliberation and a slight Harvard accent which might well be stronger considering the many years he spent at Harvard University doing one thing and another. He wears white suits in summer as do most other upper officials—not including Hoover, who affects blue coat and white flannels—in Washington during this season. Castle is both socially and officially important. His favorite playmate is Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania. The two men have built similar houses side by side, sharing a common garden, on the same small section of S street occupied by Mrs. Woodrow Wilson's home and the house Hoover had when he was secretary of commerce.

No Time to Swim

Castle's favorite hobby is swimming, his favorite swimming is in the waters of Bermuda and his favorite swimming and sun-bathing costume is his bare skin. He swims in town at the Raquet Club, and sometimes motorboats down the well-known Potomac river. Lately, being on this end of the wire from Paris and conferring with European ambassadors and President Hoover continually, he has had no time for swimming.

He is the descendant of New England and missionary stock. He was born in 1878, a subject of King Kalakaua, because his grandfather had gone there in 1836 as financial secretary of the American Board of Missions. Castle's father, after serving in Joseph H. Choate's law firm in New York, had become attorney general of Hawaii, later Hawaiian minister to Washington and then an annexation commissioner, in 1893.

Hawaii to Harvard

Castle went from Hawaii to Harvard and was in the class of 1900 along, among others with Governor General Dwight Davis, of the Philippines and men who later became ambassadors, ministers or consuls general—Robert Bilas, William Phillips, Peter A. B. Widener and Charles Curtis. Castle subsequently taught English for three years at Harvard, was assistant dean from 1906 to 1913 and at the time war broke out was editor of the Harvard Graduates Magazine.

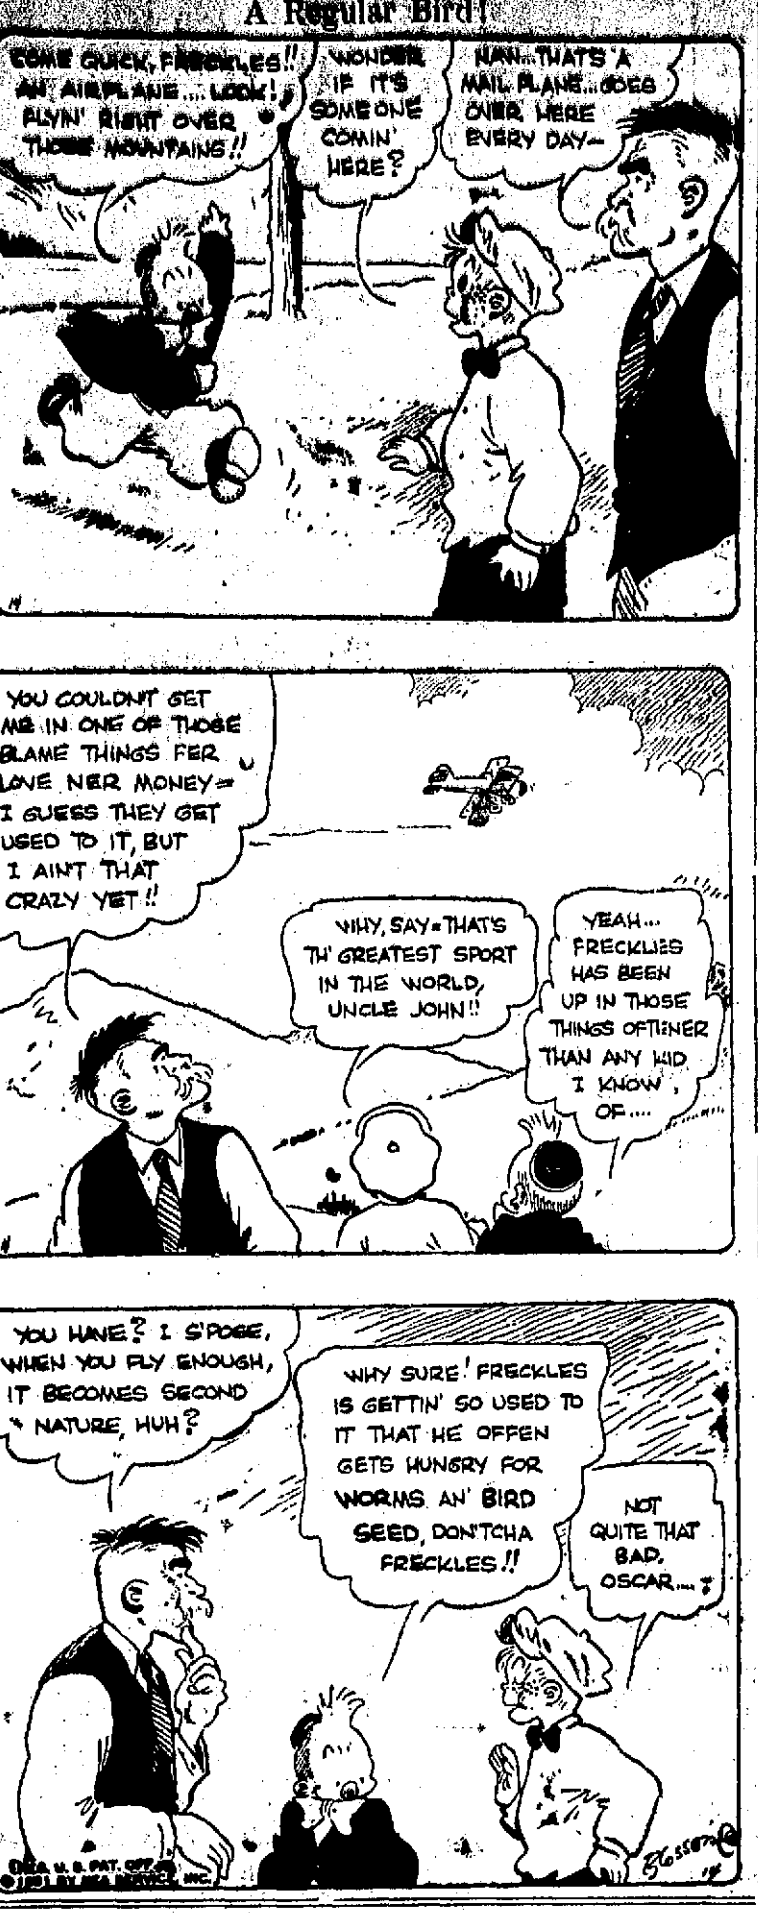

His understanding of people, his ability to make them like him, and perhaps the acknowledged finesse with which he operates as a diplomat, were first demonstrated as he handled undergraduates at Harvard.

The war brought him here and he organized for the Red Cross a bureau for prisoner relief and search for missing men. His office became an important one, with about 3000 employees here and in the camps.

One breathed it to himself—an ugly thought.
And oh, how far it sped!
And the evil that it wrought,
And the rank poison spread,
Lodged in his brain, the thought took root,
And all unknown, unheard,
The plant sent out its poison shoot,
The thought flowered in a word,
A whisper in the ear of a fond friend,
The word, with evil life,
Went gathering foulness the world's end,
And blasted a great life,
And the evil thought and chafy speech
Went on his careless way,
Rising, as he would reach,
Lodged in his brain that day,
Great evil is a brook that flows unseen,
And broadens as it goes;
To cleanse the stream, means first to clean
The spring from which it flows.

A's and Senators Split Double Bill

Philadelphia Six Games Ahead—St. Louis 4 1/2 in the National

One of the crucial series of mid-summer baseball opened in Philadelphia Monday with the Athletics splitting a double-header against Washington, and remaining six full games in the lead for the American pennant.

Philadelphia, with Lefty Grove pitching and George Earnshaw finishing the game for him, captured the first contest behind some heavy hitting, 12 to 7. Fred Marberry, the Washington ace, outpitched Grove in nearly every inning, but Grove got credit for his 18th victory of the year, against two defeats. Cochrane, Bishop and Fox were the Athletic batsmen who saved the day.

Washington captured the second game, 6 to 4, in a tight pitchers' battle between Alvin Crowder and Rube Walberg. Home runs by Harris and Kugel in the sixth inning put the game on ice for Crowder and the Senators.

In the National League, the St. Louis Cardinals smashed the Chicago Cubs in the final of their three-game series, 12 to 5. St. Louis is now four and a half games ahead of the nearest National League club.

Trade Old Hens in For New Pullets

Records Show That Young Stock Are Better Producers

"Now's the time to 'trade in' those old hens on new pullets," says the Southern Grain & Produce Co., local Purina dealer. "You can get more for the culs now than later and the money they bring will provide a good growing mash for the growing pullets, a feed that will get them ready for the most early this fall when egg prices start upward!"

He believes this good advice in view of market experts' predictions of better egg prices next fall. Less chicks were started this spring, market experts say, which means fewer pullets. Full eggs must come from pullets, so there will be fewer eggs.

During July and the first part of August are the days to cull unprofitable birds. "In culling the flock,"

Pisgah Wins Ragged Game From Blevins

In a very good demonstration of how baseball should not be played Pisgah defeated Blevins on the local field last Saturday 22 to 13. At no time was the game interesting and the only near thrills for the home folks were the two long hits a three bagger by Cummins and a home run by Ames.

Don't Rasp Your Throat With Harsh Irritants

"Reach for a LUCKY instead"

Touch your Adam's Apple with your finger. You are actually touching your larynx—this is your voice box—it contains your vocal chords. When you consider your Adam's Apple, you are considering your throat—your vocal chords.

"It is part of my business to notice the types of tobacco bought by various concerns. In all instances, The American Tobacco Company's buyers select that rich, mellow type of tobacco that the farmer justly calls 'The Cream of the Crop' for their brand of LUCKY STRIKE."

These are the very words of an experienced tobacco buyer on the Southern market.

LUCKY STRIKE not only promises but gives you the very finest of each season's tobacco crop. We pay the highest prices, to be sure of getting the Cream of the Crop. And then to be sure that you get the greatest enjoyment, we "TOAST" these fine tobaccos—thereby expelling certain harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos. These expelled irritants we sell to manufacturers of chemical compounds. LUCKIES are always kind to your throat. Be careful in your choice of cigarettes.

Plan For Fall Crop Now Say Leaders

Cover Crops and Gardens Are Good Investment For Farm Owners

Those who have not made preparation for the fall crop should be better off now. Take all precaution to get a good stand and fertilizer well. Remember that all root-crops and leaf-crops require the same treatment. Potatoes in some form are essential to a good yield of potatoes, and is equally essential in making smooth, high quality tubers. With plenty of potash in the fertilizer mixture there will be a very much higher percentage of potatoes that will grade No. One.

WEEKLY CROP REVIEW For North Hempstead County

While it is not the purpose of this article to seem too optimistic, it is written with a feeling that the general crop conditions of north Hempstead county are away above the average years. It is true that a general rain is needed throughout this section. But outside of the weather conditions this section of the county has every right to feel proud of their crops.

Twenty Carloads Tomatoes Shipped

Approximately twenty car loads of tomatoes have been shipped from North Hempstead county since the opening of the shipping season some three weeks ago. It is estimated that the harvest will not close for the next two weeks. A good general rain over the section would perhaps lengthen this time.

MOTORISTS

When you are in a hurry Good Gasoline and Motor Oil will get you there.

Heart of Liane

Liane knew she had never enjoyed a day more thoroughly. Even the thought she was "playing hooky" didn't bother her much. They drove through the drifting leaves to a little blue and scarlet tea room where girls in Peg Woffington caps served them a golden omelet and golden mushrooms and some ruby jelly in a dish the color of jade. They drank tea out of thin cups and the young man smoked as the girl ate a pistache pastry.

"You don't smoke?" Clive asked. Liane apologized. "I never learned," she said. Clive seemed to like that. They drove to what he called a "shoppy" where they bought the bed jacket, a froth of pink satin and cream-colored lace, and a new book and a thin box of mints, Cass' favorite candy.

"You're nice," Liane said to the young man as they turned homeward. Said it simply, matter-of-factly, quite without coquetry. She meant it. "You think so—honestly? You've got over being mad at me?" "I was never—exactly mad," Liane confessed, looking up at him with candid, troubled eyes. "I was confused and startled at the whole idea. I didn't know exactly how to take it."

"I'm a clumsy oaf," Clive said, gripping the wheel grimly with those lean brown hands of his. Liane said, "You weren't but I thought you were ragging me and I didn't like it. The whole thing sounded—well, fantastic." "Fantastic, eh? You thought that?" "There, drat the boy! He was turning grumpy again." "The idea of marrying me was a fantastic!" His laugh grated a little. Liane sat up suddenly, said quite sharply above the roar of the motor, "You know I didn't mean that! Why will you be so difficult? I meant that the idea of your marrying me was extraordinary. Co-phetua and the beggar maid." She thought compassionately that she knew why this young man was so moody, so mercurial. He had the tortured temperament of the very shy. She knew she was right when his smile came drifting back, when he looked down at her again with the light of companionship in his eyes.

"Don't talk such rot," he said humbly. "You're miles too good for me and you ought to know it." "Thanks for the aid!" This minute she said that she was sorry. It was like Muriel—a cheap echo of that jazz girl with the thousand sculps at her belt. But the young man didn't seem to notice. He drove on through the golden afternoon. Out of his deep reverie he said with abruptness, "Let's announce our engagement before Tressa Lord arrives!"

THE new girl was all in gray. Gray kidskin coat wrapped tightly about her long slimness.
